Committee News

We are now on Facebook.
www.facebook.com/FinchleyHS
Please 'like' us on Facebook - it all helps towards publicising the vote for our Tesco Bags of Help Grant. Here we need everyone's help. Tesco customers need to ask for a red plastic Tesco disc (or even a handful) when they shop and drop it into our box. Please go along, and collect the tokens. Tell your friends. If we win we could bump up the grant to £10,000 or even £12,000. With this we'd strip the old temporary tarpaulin and put a proper roof on the Piggery. Voting at our local Tesco store and Tesco Express shops takes place over two weeks:
31st October - 13th November.

Is there anyone who has web design skills and would be prepared to help Judy Woollett with our website, please?

Harvest Days

Clare Ludlow, an enthusiastic and youthful volunteer, took these photographs at our NGS Open Day and writes:

Despite hot competition from Finchley Nurseries the Gordon Road Allotment NGS Open Day for charity was another roaring success this year, raising £1,100.

The day saw plot holders, green fingered locals and curious passers by stroll through the Gordon Road gates to enjoy an afternoon of produce shopping, tours and the all important tea and cake!

The allotment honey proved as popular as ever and the preserves stand also did a great trade, selling out before the day was done. The fruits of the allotment were on show too, with pumpkins, potatoes, peppers, courgettes and more all available to purchase.

It was wonderful to see so many visitors on the allotment, enjoying the splendour of nature and our plot holders' talents in preserving, baking, and harvesting.

Thank you to Judy for organising the event and special thanks to all the many volunteers who helped to make the day such a great success.

Save the date: NGS Open Day 10th September 2017

New Fence

Gordon Road Allotment Site has been fortunate enough to have had its inadequate old wooden fencing removed and a new secure fence has been erected. Plot holders had suffered a spate of break-ins and tools and equipment were stolen from several sheds. June Brookes, the Site Secretary, says that there have been no known break-ins since the new fence was erected. All thanks to plot holder and Allotment Committee member, Felicity Nock, who, with June, organised and oversaw the project.

Catherine wins first prize

Catherine Schmitt, green fingered President of Finchley Horticultural Society, won first prize in the house plants category for her African Violet, 'Rob's Trailing Vanilla', at the Barnet Allotment Federation Show in August this year.

Growing Quinoa or those 6ft plants on my plot are not weeds!! by Helen Skelton

Quinoa growing on my plot

Each year I like to try something a little different on my plot and this I have had a go at growing quinoa (pronounced keen-wa). Quinoa is the latest health food because, unlike wheat or rice, it is a complete protein.

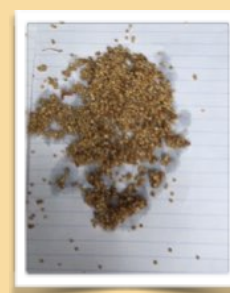

In April, I planted the quinoa seeds by scattering them to form blocks and then covered them with loose soil. They germinated quickly and in theory I was supposed to thin them out but I chose to leave them as I wasn't going to get much of a crop doing that! Plus you don't want weeds growing in amongst them so my crowding method seems to have stopped too many stray weeds infiltrating the crop. During May and June they grew well and were soon a lot taller than me (I'm just under 5ft). They flowered and seed heads formed nicely, swelling and drying out as the summer progressed.

The quinoa was ready to harvest in September when the leaves have fallen leaving just the dry seed heads. I stripped the seeds easily off the stalk upwards with a gloved hand. The crop needs to be cleaned by sieving thoroughly to remove all the 'chaff'. This proved challenging as I didn't have any effective equipment for winnowing. However, I persevered and tried a method involving a bowl of water. The theory is that the quinoa sinks to the bottom and the debris floats on top. It worked partially and I got some clean quinoa to cook with.

Quinoa Salad

- 1 cup quinoa uncooked
- 1 red onion finely chopped
- 6 cherry tomatoes quartered
- 1 yellow pepper chopped into chunks
- 2 tsp chopped fresh coriander
- Black pepper
- Basil leaves
- Optional: I like to add olive oil and lemon juice

Soak the quinoa then rinse to remove any bitter twang it might have. Simmer for about 15 minutes in 2 cups of water or until soft. Add salt or vegetable bouillon at this stage. Keep a close watch and add more water if the quinoa is still hard. Leave the saucepan to stand with a tea cloth on it to absorb the steam. Once cooked, leave to cool, place in a large bowl and add the other ingredients.
